Newark's Plight.

Our city has a large funded debt, but compared with the debt obligations of the city of Orange, it is not a heavy burden on the taxpayer, as the larger part of it is self-paying, while the balance is offset to a considerable extent by sinking fund accumulations. But with Newark's natural growth, and with annexations of adjacent territory and population, the volume of debt must increase, as new and costly improvements of all kinds will be demanded and cannot be denied.

Where it is impracticable to reduce or keep down public expenses new public revenue is necessary. A high tax rate with corresponding valuations forbid placing additional taxes on the people. We must look for new sources of income. Other municipalities in the State, which are not as well situated financially as Newark is, and have less public improvements, will come to the end of their tether sooner than we shall. Their only escape is by means of new tax revenue.—Newark Advertiser.
